

James Mullinger Biography

James Mullinger was one of the top stand ups in the UK as well as the Comedy Editor for GQ Magazine when he decided to make the permanent move to Atlantic Canada. Despite interviewing the likes of Tom Cruise, George Clooney and Cameron Diaz for his TV show, working with the likes of Jerry Seinfeld and Russell Peters and dining with everyone from Tony Bennett to Samuel L Jackson, James was not happy because his work took him away from his family. In 2014 he left it all behind and moved to a small, beautiful town in New Brunswick for a better quality of life for his wife and two young children. As he will tell you, this is the best decision he ever made. Finding a new love for life, he and his family thrived in the friendly, happy community of New Brunswick. Then, oddly, his career took off in ways he never expected in his new home and his story will change how you look at work, life and love forever.

Since his arrival he has been taking Canada by storm. He has been nominated for a Canadian Comedy Award for Best Live One Person Show and a Just For Laughs Award for Best Comedy Show. James has headlined at numerous comedy festivals and clubs across Canada, appeared on CBC many times, produced two seasons of his own television series which documents his comedy performances while travelling around Canada, has twice sold out the Imperial Theatre in Saint John and in 2016 welcomed over 4,500 people to Saint John's Harbour Station for a standing ovation show (beating Jerry Seinfeld's attendance record in the process). In 2015 a big budget movie has been made about his life (starring actors from Twilight, Downton Abbey and Notting Hill and headline comedians such as Jimmy Carr, Gilbert Gottfried and Pete Zedlacher). James also works closely with many local charities and regularly helps raise much needed funds in his community and around the province.

This well rounded, high energy comic is at home on an edgy bar show or equally hilarious in a corporate clean environment.